The Industrial Revolution changed society by introducing new technologies and methods of production. It started in the late 18th century and led to significant advancements in manufacturing, transportation, and agriculture. This period laid the foundation for modern industrialized societies.

Factories replaced small workshops, and cities grew rapidly as people moved from rural areas to find work. This shift from farms to factories brought big changes in how society was structured. Capitalism grew, creating a new working class and leading to protests for better treatment.

Inventions like the steam engine and machines for making cloth changed how things were made, making them faster and cheaper. This helped the economy grow and made goods cheaper for everyone. New ways to travel, like trains and steamships, made trade easier and connected faraway places. But not everything was good. Factories made a lot of pollution, and forests were cut down for fuel. This hurt the environment. Workers often had to work long hours in bad conditions for little pay, leading to protests and demands for better rights.

Questions:

- a) What changes did the Industrial Revolution bring?
- b) When did the Industrial Revolution start?
- c) What did factories replace?
- d) Why did cities grow during the Industrial Revolution?
- e) What is capitalism?
- f) Who protested during the Industrial Revolution?
- g) What inventions helped production during this time?
- h) How did new transportation methods help?
- i) What were some bad things about the Industrial Revolution?
- j) Why did workers protest?
- k) What can we learn from the Industrial Revolution's impact on the environment and society?
